

THE REVIEW PROCESS

Hearings of the BCRB are conducted by panels consisting of a lawyer or a judge, a psychiatrist and one other member.

Parties at a BCRB hearing include the accused, the accused's counsel, a representative of the Attorney General (Crown Counsel) and a representative of BC's Youth or Adult Forensic Psychiatric Services systems and their counsel.

In making a disposition the BCRB receives evidence about the crime, the accused's criminal, psychiatric and social history, and may hear from witnesses and victims.

Hearings of the BCRB are open to the public except in certain circumstances. The accused's psychiatric information may be kept confidential.

Accused persons have the right to be represented by legal counsel at hearings of the BCRB.

The Legal Services Society may provide legal representation to accused persons, either through the Mental Health Law Program or from the private bar. The BCRB can appoint counsel for the accused where the interests of justice require.

An accused or another party may ask the BCRB to hold a hearing to review a person's status at any time.

Victims May:

- Request notice of BCRB hearings
- Attend BCRB hearings
- Submit a Victim Impact Statement (M.I.S.) for consideration by the BCRB when it makes a decision

THE BRITISH COLUMBIA REVIEW BOARD AND MENTALLY DISORDERED ACCUSED PERSONS

INTRODUCTION TO THE BC REVIEW BOARD (BCRB)

The British Columbia Review Board (BCRB) is an independent adjudicative tribunal established under the Criminal Code of Canada.

The BCRB's mandate is to protect public safety while safeguarding the rights and freedoms of mentally disordered persons accused of committing a criminal offence.

The BCRB makes and reviews dispositions (orders) regarding accused persons who have been found "unfit to stand trial" or "not criminally responsible", because they suffer from a mental disorder.

An accused persons mental illness can affect how his/her trial is handled by the Courts in two key ways:

If evidence establishes that the accused committed the offence but lacked the required intent because of a mental disorder, the court can make a verdict that the accused was not criminally responsible on account of mental disorder (NCRMD).

If evidence establishes that an accused is unable to:

- understand the nature or object of the proceedings,
- understand the possible consequences of the proceedings, or communicate with counsel, the court may find that the accused is unfit to stand trial (UST).

UNFIT TO STAND TRIAL (UST)

Persons accused of committing crimes are presumed to be mentally fit to stand trial, that is:

- to understand the nature or object of the Court process
- to understand the possible consequences
- to be able to communicate with counsel.

A Court may order a psychiatric assessment to assist in determining the accused's mental capacity to stand trial.

When a Court finds an accused mentally unfit to stand trial, the accused comes under the jurisdiction of the BCRB.

The BCRB must hold a hearing to further assess the accused's fitness to stand trial and to make a disposition (order) within either 45 to 90 days of the court's verdict.

In making a disposition the BCRB must form an opinion about the accused's fitness to stand trial, and must consider:

- 1) The protection of the public (whether the accused is dangerous)
- 2) The accused's mental condition
- 3) The reintegration of the accused into society
- 4) The accused's other needs.

In a "fitness" case only two dispositions are available:

- 1) That the accused be held in custody
- 2) That the accused be discharged on conditions, i.e. the accused is released with restrictions on his or her freedom.

If the BCRB determines that the accused is fit to stand trial, the accused is returned to court. The Court will once more try the issue of fitness and then render a verdict.

NOT CRIMINALLY RESPONSIBLE ON ACCOUNT OF MENTAL DISORDER (NCRMD)

A Court may make a verdict of NCRMD if it is satisfied that an accused person:

- 1) Committed a criminal offence; and
- 2) Was unable to appreciate the nature or quality of the act or of knowing it was wrong because of a mental disorder.

A verdict of NCRMD is an alternative to a verdict of acquittal or guilty.

After a person is found NCRMD, the BCRB must hold a hearing within either 45 or 90 days, and make an appropriate disposition (order).

In making a disposition, the BCRB hears evidence from the Director of Forensic Psychiatric Services, the accused and the Crown, and must consider:

- 1) The protection of the public (whether the accused is dangerous)
- 2) The accused's mental condition
- 3) The reintegration of the accused into society
- 4) The accused's other needs.

A disposition (order) of the BCRB may consist of:

- 1) An absolute discharge (similar to a pardon)
- 2) A conditional discharge (e.g. supervision/counseling/prohibition against alcohol, drugs or weapons)
- 3) Custody or detention in a designated psychiatric hospital, such as the Forensic Psychiatric Hospital, or Maples Adolescent Treatment Centre (for youth).

An accused who is not absolutely discharged is entitled to a hearing every year to reassess whether the person poses a significant threat to the public and, if so, to determine what restrictions or conditions should be imposed.

Conditions imposed by the BCRB are enforceable in the same manner as a probation order, failure to comply may result in arrest without warrant, and detention.
